

A message from Scadding Court Community Centre

Downtown Toronto is changing. The demographics in the area are shifting as new Canadians from many different cultures choose to settle downtown, as the local population ages, as it becomes increasingly desirable to live downtown and as the building boom creates a huge number of new condominiums, apartments and houses in the area. What has stayed the same however, is that this area is home to a community that wants and needs a wide variety of affordable, accessible and relevant services.

At Scadding Court we strive to grow and evolve together with our community. To do this we listen to community members when they tell us what they need, develop new programming and services, adapt our organization to reflect the changing times and work together with a wide variety of partners.

With the support of many generous donors and funders, we were able to provide an extensive and varied range of programs and services in 2002. We were able to step in when recreation programs for local children were decreased, make our After-Four programming more accessible through the Walking School Bus, contribute to cervical cancer prevention in newcomers through the Cervical Cancer Prevention Initiative research and education project, participate in the extensive process surrounding the development of the local Early Years Centre and related initiatives, continue to work toward the inclusion of people with disabilities into the Centre and do much, much more.

As always, it is the people of this community that provide Scadding Court with the inspiration, creativity and energy that we need to do our best in serving the local community and beyond!

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

Health Services

The Cross-Cultural Health Services Clinic was a busy place in the year 2002. Community members made use of the Family Health, Women's Health, and Chiropractic services offered as well as the regular eye screening for seniors. This past year was year 2 of the 3 year Cervical Cancer Prevention Initiative, a community-based research study designed to examine immigrant women's understanding of health and illness and to investigate whether health education workshops are successful in increasing knowledge about and receiving Pap tests, used to screen for cervical cancer. The job skills training program offered to foreign-trained health professionals was another active component of the clinic, providing orientation and specific training to health care professionals with credentials from another country who hope to pursue Canadian careers in health care.

Athletics & Recreation

Recreation is a broad term that means many things to many people. It brings people together, develops skills, offers opportunities, contributes to health and well-being and is a very important element in a community. As the range of services Scadding Court offers expands, we incorporate recreation into that expansion and continue to see it as a key component of what we do.

Scadding Court continued to offer its regular athletic and recreation programming in 2002. We are increasingly making efforts to improve the accessibility of our programs. One way through which we do this is the Walking School Bus which picks up children from local schools, brings them to the Centre for programs and then escorts them home. We also do our best to get the funds we need to be able to offer programming at other sites in the community. We continue to work on ways to make our recreation facilities and programs more accessible to people with disabilities.

Family Resource Program/ Emergency and Occasional Childcare Program

For over 20 years our Family Resource Program has offered a drop-in, weekly Indoor Park, resource library, referrals and parent support. In 2002 we added a number of programs to further promote the healthy and positive development of children aged 0 - 6 in this community: Peer Nutrition, Family-Literacy and School Readiness. All have been very successful, particularly in assisting newcomer families to prepare for their children's educational experience.

The Emergency and Occasional Childcare Program continues to be the only one of its kind in the city by offering flexible, affordable and high quality childcare to parents and caregivers who are not able to access other sorts of childcare. Clients include families in need, parents / caregivers seeking employment, housing or more permanent childcare, parents who require temporary childcare, parents in crisis, caregivers who have appointments and those that simply want a break! The demand for and success of this service is an indicator of its' value and Scadding Court is pleased to be able to continue offering it to the community.
