SCADDING COURT COMMUNITY CENTRE

2017

ANNUAL REPORT

A MESSAGE FROM SCADDING COURT COMMUNITY CENTRE

The development of our new strategic plan in 2017 for 2018 – 2022 affirmed for Scadding Court that the community, volunteers, partners, funders and stakeholders believe the directions outlined five years ago remain relevant, and endorsed the continuation of priorities that will directly impact our changing neighbourhood.

This year, SCCC intentionally focused on two themes:

- Strengthening our local responses to community needs
- Building and promoting our models and programs related to social enterprise to address a changing labour economy

In 2017 we expanded various areas of core work: introducing expanded settlement services in response to international crisis; expanding seniors programs in response to an aging population; strengthening the foundation for early years programming to ensure families get what they need to thrive, and letting go of our leadership on initiatives that other partners will continue. It has been a transitional and fulfilling year of both advocacy and service delivery.

Settlement needs raised the necessity for services for Syrian refugees, and SCCC continued to serve other priority populations locally and across the city. This led SCCC to think deeply about a holistic approach to support for newcomers seeking resources in their new home.

The introduction of new, expanded and diversified seniors programming demonstrates the need is significant, and SCCC is proud to support this work and share our accomplishments bringing together communities with unique experiences to learn, break bread and laugh together.

Early years and families have long been a priority for SCCC. We are pleased to have received ongoing funding for one of our most popular programs that prepares preschoolers, particularly newcomers and their families, for their first school experience.

We transitioned the Investing in our Diversity Scholarship program to Toronto Community Housing (TCHC). While we remain a partner, TCHC will take the lead in future years, given the majority of recipients are residents of building communities managed by the corporation.

Many of our front line staff received training from the Schizophrenic Society of Ontario to encourage better understanding and to learn strategies for interacting with individuals living with mental illness, particularly those living with schizophrenia and psychosis, with a goal to

SOCIAL ENTERPRISE

More and more we have seen how economic justice issues continue to be a top priority for many low-income people. Barriers to traditional employment, lack of access to resources and high rental rates for retail space in Toronto have long been a barrier to those seeking to exercise their entrepreneurial skills.

SCCC is a believer in breaking down silos and braiding initiatives together wherever possible. To achieve this, we partnered with Ryerson University's Diversity Institute to develop a Newcomer Hub to support training and resources for newcomer entrepreneurs. We are excited about what shape this initiative will take in 2018. We are hopeful it will prove to be an effective model that can be tailored to any population in the province and country in the future.

SCCC is proud to have also partnered with the Waterfront Business Improvement Area (BIA), to co-host the Waterfront Artisan Market. Initiatives such as these provide opportunities for entrepreneurs to showcase their products and talent with large audiences. We look forward to continuing this partnership in 2018 which demonstrates that collaborations between the private and public sector can help contribute to economically and socially healthier, more inclusive communities.

SCCC is pleased to announce that after many years of working with Thorncliffe Park Women's Committee (TPWC), with the support of the Trillium Foundation's Local Poverty Reduction Fund and Metcalf Foundation's Opportunities Fund, we saw the launch of their Park Café in R.V. Burgess Park. Premier Kathleen Wynne attended the event and TPWC has secured resources to build their business model and create their own, local and community-based social enterprise. This would not have been possible without the support of both Trillium and Metcalf.

To advance partnerships that build stronger ties amongst the academic, private and public sectors, SCCC, with the University of Toronto's Rotman School of Business, hosted 350 MBA students for their frosh event. Neel Joshi, Director of Student Life and International Experience, suggested this as a potential opportunity for new students to consider the possibilities of city-building and economic justice as they begin their paths to be our future captains of industry. The events were very successful, and we will continue this partnership in 2018.

SCCC was also asked to host a number of tours by the German Chamber of Commerce, a visiting Norwegian government delegation, University of Toronto students from various disciplines, the Maximum City group at University of Toronto, and 8-80 Cities. All of these tours help to spread the word and our thinking about what a community centre can contribute towards the economic and social life of cities.

REDEVELOPMENT

SCCC is excited to see that in 2017, our long anticipated redevelopment became a priority once again for the municipality. Councillor Joe Cressy brought together the necessary municipal stakeholders to strike both Steering and Operational committees that will oversee the consultations and process to redevelop Scadding Court, the Sanderson Branch of the Toronto Public Library (TPL), and the city's Parks, Forestry and Recreation assets.

We look forward to meetings in 2018 where the community will guide us on their priorities and help us think through the connectivity with the rest of the neighbourhood as the Alexandra Park revitalization continues, and the Bathurst and Dundas area continues to change.

better de-escalate situations and encourage better program participation and social interactions. The impact was immediate; strengthening communication, building confidence and increasing capacity for staff, with community members showing improved ability to participate in programs and feel that they are in a safe, welcoming environment.

SCCC, with the leadership of Councillor Joe Cressy, was also able to reignite excitement around our redevelopment with Toronto Public Library and the City of Toronto's Parks, Forestry and Recreation department. 2018 will welcome a series of planning and consultation meetings that will bring community voice to the city's leadership in revitalizing a destination hub in a neighbourhood that continues to change dramatically, year on year.

It is with deep thanks that we welcome the new partnerships we have established with academic institutions such as Ryerson University's Diversity Institute and University of Toronto's Rotman Business School, city-building organizations and others to serve our neighbourhood. We also welcomed the Fringe Festival to its new home at Scadding Court, bringing the independent theatre festival to our backyard. New relationships with other city-building organizations began in 2017 as well, particularly conversations with Maximum City and 8/80 Cities, with whom we hope to build stronger ties with in the coming years.

Without our volunteers, community, staff and board, this would not have been possible. We hope 2018 will bring more exciting transformation to our communities and a new environment that will help innovative thinking capture the imaginations of residents living in a rapidly changing city, advancing equity as a core principle in this work.

Sincerely,
Board and Staff of Scadding Court Community Centre

SETTLEMENT

SCCC's settlement program has been adapting to local changes in demographics over the last few years. This year, one-third of clients who received services directly or who received warm referrals to services they required, are of Syrian origin. Addressing the crisis in Syria and ensuring refugees are welcomed and have a community to be part of was a large focus of creating a culture of belonging.

To this end, SCCC held focus groups with newcomers experiencing frustration at not being able to work, or receiving the practical supports they need to be entrepreneurial. To address this, partnering with The Diversity Institute (DI) at Ryerson University and with the leadership of Wendy Cukier, SCCC and DI successfully obtained funding for a Newcomer Entrepreneurship Hub. This new initiative, to be launched in 2018, we anticipate will address many of the gaps in service and resource access we heard about from newcomers to Toronto.

Inclusion is a strong focus of the Centre. The settlement team ensured our organization’s participation in efforts that are national, given the systemic nature of the local issues we see every day. Planning began this year to host a Citizenship Ceremony in 2018 at the Centre, with our new partner, the Fringe Festival. This is an exciting opportunity to bring together two very different worlds- artists and community service, to celebrate the inauguration of those who will join our communities long term.

Building on the themes of inclusion and belonging, 100 Arabic- speaking Government Assisted Refugees (GARs) actively participated in community events such as our Eid celebration and ‘Night in the Middle East’. 200 diverse settlement program participants attended our Lunar New Year celebration, Newcomer Welcome Fair and holiday party –SCCC has found social events to be a way of connecting newcomers to both SCCC and other relevant programs.

Popular as always, SCCC served 400 clients through our annual free income tax clinics which were provided by staff across Toronto and the GTA.

In total, over 1,500 newcomers received settlement services from SCCC’s Immigrant and Settlement Adaptation Program (ISAP) in 2017, and many other newcomers not directly served through ISAP, joined other programs both at the Centre and across the city.

SENIORS

The last several years, based on our last strategic plan, focused efforts on diversifying our seniors programs. In response to research dating back over a decade and anticipating an aging population and lack of services, SCCC is pleased that we have been able to provide opportunities to an expanded population of ethno-cultural seniors groups.

SCCC has been well recognized for services provided to Chinese language speaking seniors. In 2016 we began supporting a group of seniors, primarily women, from Latin American countries. The women who form part of this group are from many different countries and have various experiences coming to Canada as refugees, those seeking political asylum, and those who have suffered innumerable and unspeakable losses.

In 2017, SCCC, with the leadership of the coordinators of both programs, focused efforts on bringing the two groups together- to share learnings, stories, experiences, and build diverse social networks amongst themselves. Despite language barriers, the groups agreed on joint activities which culminated in an excursion to our capital, Ottawa, to learn about the parliamentary process. With support from a Seniors Community Grant from the Province’s Ministry of Citizenship and Immigration, the group travelled to Ottawa, was hosted by our local MP Adam Vaughan, and were able to experience the wonders our capital has to offer.

The group also visited the Ontario legislature, hosted by the Speaker of the House MPP David Levac and former MPP for Trinity Spadina, Rosario Marchese. During lunch they had a workshop on the range of provincial responsibilities and services with a special focus on senior services and civic engagement.

The Spanish Speaking Seniors programs are centred on health with a focus on memory, Alzheimers, dementia, mobility, depression; activities are strictly related to memory, coordination mobility and access to cultural and educational activities. Through this work, developing support networks happen automatically through the relationships developed, which in turn, create expanded opportunities for the group to engage more broadly in civic society. A priority for this group is focusing on civic education and participation in municipal, provincial and national issues relevant to them. The program, apart from being participant-led, counts on the volunteer support of two doctors, a psychiatrist, massage therapist, in addition to other content experts and/or instructors.

SCCC is very proud of our success in being able to practice acceptance of their experience and leadership in hosting authentically participant-led programming in a sector culture of service delivery. We look forward to expanding these programs further in the coming year.

EARLY YEARS

The Early Years programming sector is experiencing changes as a result of the new provincial framework and regulatory environment. Specific direction is yet unclear, but efforts began sector-wide to convene those impacted that deliver respite care, which may or may not be available in 2018 and onwards. 1200 signatures have been secured to demonstrate the need for respite care services as the city and province work out details of the new regulatory environment.

SCCC is also very pleased to announce ongoing funding for one of the most popular early years programs we run. Formerly known as “Success by Six”, our new United Way funded program, called “Steps to Learning”, builds on our 16 years of experience preparing newcomer children and their families for entry into the Toronto school system. Honing basic early development skills in physical activity, motor skill development, oral and written communications, this program focuses on ensuring children are equipped with what they need to achieve success in the Toronto school system, and parents have the knowledge they need to support the health of the family.
