University in the Community

Re-connecting youth with education

Together with Ryerson University's Spanning the Gaps Program, SCCC is offering the 1st year university sociology course "Popular Culture". Our students are 25 young people (aged 17-30) from all walks of life who want to re-connect to the education system, gain confidence and get academic experience (and a university credit!). Volunteer tutors offer study sessions to support students and Ryerson helps them to chart educational pathways that fit with where they are at in their lives and where they want to go. Classes began on April 14th and will run through to mid-July.

Students are analysing mass media and learning critical thinking skills to interpret, understand, and relate popular culture to their lives. They are exploring topics like ownership, advertising, consumption, representation, gender, race, social class, community and globalization and other issues that are relevant to their communities and their lives.

This unique partnership is one of many initiatives at Scadding Court that engage and support youth. For more information on our youth programs please visit
